When someone dies by suicide, faith leaders are often called upon to provide care and support to family members, friends and others in the community. As a result faith leaders may experience unique stressors and challenges that affect their own well-being. This video highlights the importance of self-care among faith leaders and shares guidance on what faith leaders can do to care for themselves after a suicide.